Hello!

Hope this email finds you well. I'm writing to share an analyst opportunity on my team at NCX. Our name stands for 'Natural Capital Exchange'-- we're using forestry remote sensing technology and auctions to generate major climate impact in a market-based fashion. The open analyst position will have wide-ranging responsibilities across research, data analysis, modeling, and business planning; it's probably ideal for someone with an economist's brain and a couple years of business experience.

If you know any recent (or not so recent) grads who might be a good fit, please share the post!

If you're interested to learn more about NCX, you may enjoy this short blog post on our auctions and this article today in the WSJ.

Best,
